Cleveland native graduates military police training

CLEVELAND, Tenn. – Pfc. Lisa Garrison graduated from the Army’s Basic Combat Training and the Basic Military Police Course, at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, November 24, 2021.

During this technical 20-week program, Garrison was trained to protect lives and property on Army installations, control traffic, prevent crime, and respond to emergencies. As a military police Soldier, Garrison will also work in force protection, anti-terrorism, and security operations. She is now assigned to the 252nd Military Police Company in Cleveland.

Garrison, who grew up in California, is thankful for the support she’s received during her training.

“I just am so thankful for my parents and family for their support through this process,” said Garrison. “I joined the Guard to support my daughter, and to be a positive influence in her life.”
