Lebanon Guardsman becomes Military Intelligence Systems Maintainer/Integrator

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – Pfc. Jordan Poole completed the U.S Army’s Basic Combat Training and Advanced Individual Training as a military intelligence systems maintainer and integrator at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, May 26.

“Pfc. Poole has completed a long and difficult training in military intelligence that allows him to pursue some great jobs in the civilian world,” said Sgt. 1st Class James Covey, Poole’s recruiter.

Poole graduated from one of the Army’s longest schools, a 42-week program, where he trained in the maintenance, testing, and repairing of communications equipment, including military intelligence computers and networks.

“I met good friends from AIT and learned a lot about computers and military intelligence systems,” said Poole. “I also received an industry standard information technology certification.”

Poole graduated from Wilson Central High School in 2014 and plans on using the Army credential assistance to obtain certifications in the information technology field. He will also use the Tennessee STRONG Act when he goes back to school to earn his degree.
