Savannah native enlists in Tennessee National Guard

SAVANNAH, Tenn. – Pfc. Haiden Lord graduated from the Army’s Basic Combat Training and the Technical Engineer Course at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, on February 27.

After nearly six months of training, Lord is now qualified to supervise and participate in construction site development. He can also conduct technical investigations, land surveys, and draft construction plans. He is now assigned to the Regimental Engineer Squadron, 278th Armored Cavalry Regiment, in Lebanon.

“I had great experiences at training and I’m excited to take what I learned there and apply it as I start my career as a Guardsmen,” said Lord.

Lord was named the distinguished honor graduate for the Technical Engineer Course, an award given to the course’s top performer. He graduated from Lebanon High School in 2021 and plans to use the Guard’s education benefits to further his education at Tennessee Technological University this fall.
