Alamo native enlists in Tennessee National Guard

ALAMO, Tenn. – Spc. Timothy McCord graduated from the Army’s Basic Combat Training and the Chemical, Biological, Radiological, and Nuclear Course at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, on August 20, 2021.

During this technical 11-week course, McCord learned to protect against the threat of weapons of mass destruction. As a CBRN specialist, McCord is qualified to decontaminate hazardous materials from spills or accidents. He is now assigned to the 230th Combat Sustainment Support Brigade in Humboldt.

“Joining the Tennessee Guard has opened many doors to new opportunities and experiences,” said McCord. “I’m excited to start my career as a Guardsman.”

McCord is a graduate of Crockett County High School and is currently enrolled in the Diesel Power Repair Course at the Tennessee College of Applied Technology.
